UPPER KLAMATH CANOE TRAIL

The Upper Klamath Canoe Trail provides a marked, 9.5 mile journey through a larger freshwater marsh. The trail can be accessed from either Rocky Point boat launch or Malone Springs boat launch.

Where the Trail is Located: From Klamath Falls, head west 25 miles on Hwy 140. Turn North onto West Side Rd follow the signs to Rocky Point boat launch. If using the Malone Springs boat launch, it is 4 miles past the Rocky Point boat launch.

Regulations: Please observe the following guidelines, they are designed to protect the marsh, wildlife and you.

- Please remain on designated trails. Other areas within the refuge are closed to protect nesting birds.
- Wocus cut trail is for non-motorized boat use only.
- Please carry out all the trash with you.
- Avoid approaching nesting birds and birds with young.
- Please carry your drinks in unbreakable containers.

Canoeing the Marsh: As you travel the segments of the Upper Klamath Canoe Trail you cannot escape the dramatic mixture of marsh, open lake, and forest. The meeting of these environments provide a rich habitat for an abundance of plant life and wildlife species.

The four segments of the canoe trail are: Recreation Creek, Crystal Creek, Wocus Cut and Malone Springs, each with their own spectacular views. Tip: Wocus Cut is best paddled in spring and early summer as it is often dry by August.

Animals of the Marsh: While birds are the most visible wildlife in the marsh, several species of mammals also live there. You may not encounter them, but beavers, muskrats, and river otters do leave signs indicating their presence along the canoe trail

The fall and spring are the best times for bird watching in this area, although, there are birds all year round. Over a million ducks, geese, swans and other birds migrating the Pacific Flyway in the spring and fall flock to this area and other freshwater marshes in the Klamath Basin.
